We’re furious and we know you are, too. Let’s do something about it.

Our commitment remains: Despite the terrible Dobbs decision, the ACLU of Maryland will continue to support our communities, local partners, and member-donors to preserve abortion rights and access for any and all people who can get pregnant. We are focused and prepared to reinforce all the rights that together we have worked so hard to protect against threats – from the safety of LGBTQ+ people from harm to the rights of immigrants targeted by the deportation machine, and so many more.

Back in 2013, with the egregious Shelby decision, the Supreme Court started chipping away at our voting rights, when the majority invalidated two provisions of the Voting Rights Act (VRA) of 1965. Section 5 of the VRA contained key protections for Black and Brown voters in southern states with long histories of voter suppression. That dangerous decision currently is having serious consequences in the redistricting process.

“Democracy just cannot flourish amid fear. Liberty cannot bloom amid hate. Justice cannot take root amid rage. America must get to work...America has no choice but to do better.”

Thurgood Marshall, Former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States and voter laws and access more generally. But now the Supreme Court justices are even more “originalist” (which should never be a goal if you care about civil and human rights), meaning we have much more to fear in future decisions that imperil our voting rights and our democracy itself.

WE THE PEOPLE means all of us.

Thankfully, the ACLU of Maryland’s strategic priorities encompass many of these pivotal issues. We’re also ready to meet the evolving, intersectional demands that these attacks on our rights from the Supreme Court represent, particularly to Black and Brown individuals and communities that have long been denied full access to these rights, even before these devastating rulings.

We must keep in mind that we have never seen true democracy or full access to rights for all. These ideas remain elusive, both in Maryland and across America. But we must imagine it, and then work to realize our vision. We won’t back down, we won’t give up, and we won’t be silent.

Together, we are stronger. If you want to make sure everyone in our state can exercise their rights so the law values and uplifts their humanity, you need to vote.

That is why the ACLU of Maryland promotes voting rights information during every statewide election cycle.

All voters – including voters who have returned to their communities from incarceration and eligible voters who are currently in jail pre-trial or in prison for a misdemeanor – need to know their rights and have access to the ballot.

Decisions we make for representation at the state, county, district, and local levels determine if and how we can restore what has been lost, preserve what is essential, and advance rights for all in the future.

Yours in liberty and equity,

Dana Vickers Shelley

ACLU of Maryland
Our goal is to have a public education system where all students can learn, thrive and are prepared to effectively engage in the social, political and economic life of their community.

Maryland guarantees the right to education in our state constitution. That is why this year, families in Baltimore City Public Schools, with the support of the ACLU and our legal partners, were back in court seeking summary judgment against the State Board of Education for its chronic and continued failure to provide constitutionally adequate educational opportunities to all students. Over decades, courts have repeatedly found funding for Baltimore City schools to be constitutionally inadequate.

Yet, a permanent plan is still needed to realize structural equity for generations of Black and Brown children who have been denied adequate and equitable resources compared to school systems in districts with more wealth. The ACLU is also working in Annapolis to secure the right to education, advocating for the Blueprint for Maryland’s Future increase targeted funding for jurisdictions with low wealth, as well as facilities funding for jurisdictions with the most outdated, deficient school buildings.

To address the dangerous school-to-prison pipeline, the ACLU also successfully advocated with partners to pass a law requiring schools to abide by existing school discipline policies if suspension or expulsion is proposed, which gives the student fair due process.

Our goal is to make government accountable by maximizing transparency, establishing limits on governmental power, and strengthening enforcement mechanisms, particularly where there is the greatest opportunity for abuse of power.

This past year, the ACLU has worked closely with community partners across the state to try to secure strong local Police Accountability Boards (PABs), a key part of the Maryland Police Accountability Act of 2021. While we did secure important victories in this campaign, it became clear that we needed to return to the General Assembly for a clear directive to local jurisdictions that they must grant independent investigatory powers to their PABs.

The ACLU has also worked collaboratively to enforce full implementation of Anton’s Law, named for 19-year-old Anton Black, who was killed by police in Greensboro, MD. Anton’s Law allows victims of police brutality to know about misconduct via a Maryland Public Information Act request. Again and again, we see the Fraternal Order of Police attempting to thwart public transparency. That is why community groups are challenging police contracts and lawsuits that seek to undermine transparency to the public about police misconduct investigations. The ultimate goal is community control of the police who are supposed to serve them.
Our goal is to ensure all Marylanders are empowered to fully participate in society regardless of citizenship or legal status.

The ACLU of Maryland helped secure a huge victory this past year as part of a legal team that played a crucial part in the national effort to protect detained immigrants from COVID-19. Importantly, Coreas v. Bounds supported successful advocacy efforts that closed all immigrant detention facilities in Maryland.

The ACLU also continued to work with partners to end 287(g) agreements. These deals between local police and the federal government’s deportation machine are dangerous to the lives and due process rights of immigrants, as well as the public safety for everyone.

This year, we also supported the RISE Coalition in a campaign prioritized by immigrants in Frederick to have a library built that is accessible to their community. And we began supporting partner efforts to create better access to healthcare for immigrants in Maryland. Both of these campaigns are part of our goal of ensuring immigrants can fully participate in our society.

Our goal is to make sure Marylanders can think and speak freely without indiscriminate surveillance and with equitable access to the public square.

Our strategies for accomplishing this important work include removing legal barriers to incarcerated persons’ contact and communication with family and others. We also work to ensure that communities across Maryland are free from warrantless mass surveillance. We successfully supported a lawsuit brought by Black leaders in Baltimore challenging the use of spy planes to surveil residents by the police department. And we have had another victory in a case brought by four residents of Baltimore’s Harlem Park neighborhood who bravely sued the city and police department after their state and federal constitutional rights were violated during a six-day, multi-block lockdown of their neighborhood.

To reduce police violence, the ACLU strongly advocated with partners to change new regulations from the Maryland Police Training Commission, to ensure the regulations did not roll back recent wins on accountability for police use of force. This focus on reducing harms caused by police is a growing priority for the ACLU. And we are working to develop tools and information that will be useful to Marylanders who are directly impacted by police violence so that they can more powerfully demand officer accountability.

Our goal is to realize an equitable system that prioritizes community-centered approaches to public safety and ends our primary reliance on incarceration.

This past year, we focused on access to parole for Marylanders serving long sentences and marijuana legalization that centers racial justice. For too long, too many people who deserve to be home with their loved ones have stayed locked inside. Through the Maryland Parole Partnership, the ACLU has supported the release of many Marylanders denied the opportunity for release – often for decades – despite serving sentences that were supposed to afford them a second change through parole. In addition, we are working to correct a drafting error that left people who need medical release as the only group that still requires gubernatorial approval for parole.

This matters because Maryland has some of the worst racial disparities among those serving life with parole sentences (77 percent) – even worse than states like Alabama and Mississippi. This past year also saw voters approve a law passed to legalize marijuana for recreational use. Now, the vital work happens to ensure against continued targeting of Black and Brown people for enforcement, by ending police stops and searches based on the alleged smell of marijuana and eliminating criminal penalties for marijuana – which is now a legal substance.

Our goal is to have an election infrastructure that guarantees universal suffrage and robust access to the ballot.

This past year, our focus has been educating voters about their rights during the statewide election and defending the racial justice protections in the Voting Rights Act as redistricting took place across Maryland following the U.S. Census. Ultimately, our state needs to restore the right to vote to all Marylanders, including those in jails and prisons. But even right now, people who have been released on parole and those in jail or incarcerated for misdemeanors still have the right to vote.

That is why a special focus of our Election Protection (EP) work is empowering those voters with information and access. Our EP program worked to improve election policy in the state and our hotline reached voters across the state with useful information and encouragement to cast their ballots. The ACLU has also been working closely with Black voters in Baltimore County, Federalsburg, and other localities around the state to challenge discriminatory election systems. And now we are working with partners to pass a Maryland Voting Rights Act that would proactively protect racial justice in voting, no matter what rulings come from an increasingly civil rights-hostile U.S. Supreme Court.

The ACLU of Maryland deeply appreciates all our member-donors, who partner with us to bring the promise of liberty and justice to life. Together, we work to empower Marylanders to exercise their rights so that the law values and uplifts their humanity. Thanks to all for your meaningful contributions!

WE BELIEVE IN COMMUNITY-CENTRIC FUNDRAISING

Traditional donor-centered fundraising elevates donors and wealth accumulated through historic and current injustice to hero status, valuing money above all other contributions. This way of fundraising does not align with who the ACLU of Maryland wants to be as an organization. Community-Centric Fundraising (CCF) takes a different approach. CCF is a movement grounded in equity and brings principles of racial, social, and economic justice into our fundraising work. CCF calls for a shift in our mindset.

Some of CCF’s 10 principles are:

- Fundraising must be grounded in race, equity, and social justice.
- Individual organizational missions are not as important as the collective community.
- Nonprofits are generous with and mutually supportive of one another.
- All who engage in strengthening the community are equally valued, whether volunteer, staff, donor, or board member.
- Time is valued equally as money.

To fulfill our commitment of centering race equity in all aspects of our work, now and increasingly in the future, we are devoting our time and resources to furthering the Community-Centric Fundraising movement. We look forward to collaborating with all of our many partners to grow this work! Learn more about our fundraising approach at our website: www.aclu-md.org/news
WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A MEMBERSHIP AND A DONATION?

The ACLU of Maryland consists of two sibling entities: the American Civil Liberties Union of Maryland and the ACLU Foundation of Maryland.

- The American Civil Liberties Union of Maryland is a 501(c)(4), which means that contributions are not tax-deductible and can be used for political lobbying. Membership contributions always fund the Union.

- The ACLU Foundation of Maryland is a 501(c)(3) charity, which means that contributions are tax-deductible and cannot be used for political lobbying. Gifts to the Foundation fund our litigation, communications, advocacy, and public education efforts in Maryland and across the country.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN DONATING TO THE ACLU OF MARYLAND AND THE NATIONAL ACLU?

At the ACLU of Maryland, we work closely with our colleagues at the National ACLU to defend civil liberties in our state and across the country. Gifts to the ACLU of Maryland are shared with the National ACLU, and vice versa.
